

JDL suspects linked to Valley bombing

Police early Wednesday arrested the West Coast leader of the Jewish Defense League and two other JDL members on suspicion of setting off explosive devices outside a North Hollywood "Jews for Jesus" center.

There was no damage nor injuries reported in the 1:05 a.m. incident in front of the Beth Shalom Religious Center, 12940 Victory Blvd. Officers with the Los Angeles Police Department's Public Disorder and Intelligence Division reportedly heard three explosions and pulled over a car carrying the three JDL members driving near the scene.

Booked in the Van Nuys Division jail and later released on $5,000 bond each were the JDL leader, Irv Rubin, 30, of Los Angeles, Earl Krugel, 34, of Van Nuys, and Robert Manning, 25, of West Los Angeles.

Rubin, the intended victim in an alleged murder plot involving three Ku Klux Klan members whose trial in that LAPD case opened Wednesday in Los Angeles Superior Court, called his arrest "a farce and a sham."

"There was no bombing whatsoever," he claimed in a telephone interview Wednesday afternoon. "I heard on the police radio it was reported to be four M-80 style firecrackers."

Li Dan Cooke, LAPD spokesman, said the devices were non-destructive explosives.

He said they were apparently tossed from a passing car and landed on the sidewalk in front of the center.

Cooke added that he was told by the center's director, Richard Cohen, there had been no trouble at the facility for more than a year but prior to that some threats were received and the center was hit with some "malicious mischief."

There were no arrests involving those incidents, Cooke said. A worker at the facility described it as a "Hebrew-Christian center for people who believe in Jesus."

Rubin said there was no feud whatsoever between his group and the center, which also has a site on Vanowen Street in Van Nuys. He observed that he certainly doesn't subscribe to the Jews for Jesus philosophy.

Mentioning the police report that no structures were hit by the devices,
